

Kids treated to a day at the theatre

CHILDREN had a dramatic day when they took a trip to the Scottish Youth Theatre's production That's Not My Name.

The group from Yoker Out of School Care enjoyed the retelling of traditional tale Rumpelstiltskin courtesy of insurance company Albany Childcare.

They were treated to an after-show party and were each given a gold coin to take home as a memento.

Mary McCluskey, the theatre troupe's artistic director, said: "This partnership with Albany has worked so well, and most importantly has allowed a group of children to enjoy a special festive day out."

Alexander Busby, who works with the after school group, added: "The way the cast pulled the kids and adults into practical participation and meaningful interaction was something that takes real and genuine commitment, skill and thought.

"I would recommend this show to anyone."
